A: You can generate the 32 bit or 64 bit COM dll and import them in your.net. I've recently done this for a project to integrate with a native API from a third party library. I created a wrapper class to export the functions that I needed from the dll and then simply import that in my.net project. I think the only limitation is the function signatures that this wrapper class supports. I took the wraps class straight from the site you've provided and it worked well.

How can we get this to work with Beautiful Soup 4.8.2. in Python 3? I am not worried about the possible formatting in the data and so I have not made any attempt to get that out. Just the one line of string I need from the file. Thank you. A: You can write your own parsing code. I think you can use regex in this case.

import re
import urllib.request as ur
def get_desired_line(soup):
    result = []
    found = False
    while (not found):
        text = []
        line = soup.prettify()
        text += [t.text for t in soup.find_all("td", {"class": "aDataBound"})]
        lines = line.split("\n") line = lines[0].encode().decode()
        if re.search("!", line):
            result += [re.sub("!", "", line).join(t.split(' ')[1])] elif re.search("!DESCR!", line):
            line = re.sub("!DESCR!", "", line).join(t.split(' ')[1]) elif re.search("ISSUER!", line):
            line = re.sub("ISSUER!", "", line).join(t.split(' ')[1])
        else:
            found = True
    return result
url = ""
soup = ur.urlopen(url).read().decode('utf-8')
