Importance of three-dimensional structure in the urease activity of Escherichia coli urease. We have synthesized alpha-carbon-13 labeled ureases with three different molecular sizes: 12.7 kDa, 4.8 kDa and 1.8 kDa to evaluate the relationship between enzymatic activity and the molecular size of the urease molecule. It was found that the enzymatic activity is correlated with the molecular size, not with the number of molecules in the preparation. 0.000002 Let  $o = -7.836 + 8$ . Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for measuring object state information and a computer readable medium storing a program for measuring object state information. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, a method for obtaining information on an object state with the use of an image pickup apparatus has been widely used. However, information on the object state cannot be simply obtained with the use of an image pickup apparatus. The image pickup apparatus, such as a camera, may cause blurring of an object state due to camera shake or the like. Additionally, an image may be defocused due to an uneven brightness of the object state. Thus, the image obtained by the image pickup apparatus is not an image suitable for object state information. Therefore, an image processing technique for restoring and extracting information on object state from a blurred or defocused image has been proposed. Examples of the restoration and extraction technique include a method disclosed in Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2002-124181. Specifically, in this method, a defocused image is restored by using an autocorrelation value of a predetermined image pattern. However, this method is intended to restore only a defocused image. Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2001-296147 discloses a method for restoring an image by using a correlation value of a predetermined image pattern and extracting an object state from the restored image. However, the object state is only extracted by considering a predetermined image pattern. Therefore, the method is not intended to extract an object state with the use of a defocused image. Additionally, the method cannot be used when an image of an object in which an arbitrary object state is desired to be extracted. Furthermore, Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI
