10/11/2010, 11:24am Zaka Posted: Oct 11, 2010 Yes I agree with that there is lots of discussion like that in th forums because Microsoft is not giving any option about that. 10/11/2010, 3:06pm Messenger Narrator Product Key Posted: Oct 11, 2010 To Rok Les I think you are a cheater. All text is talking about the same sound, no one is cheating. It depends on your language that you chose, when you installed the program, which MSN user you are, etc. 10/13/2010, 11:36am Zaka Posted: Oct 13, 2010 I think you are a cheater. What's New in the Messenger Narrator?

This is a addon for Windows Messenger 6.0 and Windows Messenger 7.0. All the functions of this add-in are controlled in Messenger control panel. Some of those options are: speed of the speech, voice, language of the text, grammar, use of the punctuation. The magic of the Narrator is that it can speak what your friends write to you, even when you chat with many persons simultaneously, since the narrator switches to the voice of each person in turn. Messenger Narrator Features: - Automatically reads what your friends write to you. - Speaks English and the language chosen by the user from the preferences. - Change the voice of the narrator (if several is installed on the system) - Change the speed of speech. - Voice of the narrator can be the one of a friend. - The spell checker can be included. - Simultaneous speaking (default) when you have more than one contact. - No need to use another program or email your friends to switch on the Narrator. - Easy to change the settings as you want. - Reads the words letter by letter or when you press the space bar. - The last paragraph in a message will be read. * Note: If you have installed more than one edition of the Messenger, but the original Windows XP version of the Narrator is installed, then this add-in will not show in the list of add-ins at the control panel, when you insert the CD-ROM. *You can enable or disable the automatic speech of the narrator in the panel of configuration: "On" means that the voice of the narrator will be chosen according to the email of the friend from which the content was sent. "Off" means that the Narrator will read without changing the voice. * Note: A change in the settings of narrator (if installed) does not cause a complete restart of Windows Messenger. You must restart Windows Messenger for the changes to take effect. * Note: If you are using Windows XP-Pro as default OS, the character is not appearing when you type the mail address of a friend with your friend display on the old format (with comma). *Note: If you have installed more than one edition of the Windows Messenger, but the original Windows XP version of the Narrator is installed, then this add-in will not show in the list of add-ins at the control
