Good question about the "can I release it". My answer about "can I release it" was a Yes it is possible and you can manage it via run menu script. It will install Sybase Central, install, and manage. You can release it with the below. Good Luck. A: You can try to install with "run menu". It allows you to create a script file with all registry settings for your setup. Before you start the setup you can append that line in the script file. After you are done with the settings you can delete the script file and run the setup script again. a. Run->Run Command Line -> Enter the command line in the command window in "run" mode: cd "\path\to\your\setup.exe" "Install.exe" /uninstall b. Run->Run Command Line -> Enter the command line in the command window in "run" mode: cd "\path\to\your\setup.exe" "Install.exe" /uninstall After you are done you can delete the script file because it's needed because a dialog is asking you to overwrite the script file or not. This is nice because you can stop the setup process in case you don't need that script or you simply want to edit the settings. A: You can release the product to WebUpdate, and then to your intended users. To release the product via WebUpdate, go to the Control Panel and choose Programs and Features. Then choose the top item on the list (this will be SQL Anywhere Studio 9, Software). Click the Change button on the main page. Pick WebUpdate from the list and click OK, then choose the Application package you want to update. Click the Update button. You should be good to go. You might have to update your ODBC settings if you're using MS SQL Server or other DBs in your environment, but that's easy. I've done this many times with success.
