Q: When and how do I call the content database? When I say when do I call the content database, do I call it directly from SQL Server or do I have to specify the name of the content database first? For example, would it be something like: `select * from [name of content database].dbo.table` I'm new to SQL Server and working on a third-party system at the moment. Thanks!

A: Depending on your version, you may need to specify the database name for the connection string (if you're connecting to multiple databases in one app). If that's the case, you just need to provide the name of the database you're selecting from.

Editor's Note: Coaching Camp is an occasional column, profiling a Texas high school football head coach. Check back regularly for more profiles. Facebook, Twitter, online journals, message boards. They've all done their part in the blogging revolution, but few things are more important, or more dominant, than a good old-fashioned face-to-face conversation. But those face-to-face conversations, too, can be controversial, especially in an area as small as Southlake, where preconceived notions of a particular coach still resonate even in the face of fierce competition. But no matter how you feel about the coaching profession, it's safe to say that there's a reason people across the nation start coaching careers: it's a vocation that has a sense of pride and meaning outside of its monetary value. In the case of Lake Travis head coach Matthew Donahue, he's not here to win games on a regular basis. He's here to make "the world a better place," and the good news is that he's taken the head coaching gig as the perfect platform for doing just that. His special teams, his attention to detail and his insistence on pushing his players to think outside the box have helped to create a competitive atmosphere that his players carry into the classroom -- and out on the field -- every day. Both his and his players' commitment to the well-being of the community is a credit to both men and shines a light on just how much damage a single player can do to a program. Donahue's unique coaching style isn't just a one-man show. He's been hired by the highest-ranked recruiting class in school history, and the talent level that the program rampage. The uprising took place during a press conference, in which officers wanted to unveil details of the investigation into the incident.

That investigation was carried out by the national police, and the government has blamed the protests on an “unorganized, spontaneous action” carried out by far-right groups.

Journalists were assaulted and one journalist is said to have been injured. Anti-riot police from the national guard are also said to have been badly beaten. This is a disturbing development for Honduras, and a lot of people are wondering what happened. The government did what it can to downplay the incident, and rumors are swirling to see what really happened. It could be an isolated incident, or it could be just the tip of the iceberg. This could potentially be the start of a new wave of unrest. [Sources: O Globo / DPA] Predictors of mobile phone usage among teenagers: a qualitative study. With the advent of mobile phones and the promotion of use among youth, this study describes teenagers' mobile phone usage and explores the correlates and predictors of mobile phone usage among teenagers. In-depth interviews and focus group discussions were carried out with adolescents, parents, teachers, and community leaders. Research was conducted at a high school in Zimbabwe. Adolescents and teachers did not tend to report consequences of mobile phone use. Mothers and fathers reported that all teenagers should have access to mobile phones. All informants encouraged teenagers to have mobile phones, and they themselves tended to use mobile phones. All students and their guardians were aware of the practice of mobile phone use, but they thought that the mobile phone was a useful
