I'm using an API where everything is done via LINQ to Entity objects, and I'm trying to get all of the entities returned and compare the outputs. I can get it done with an abstract class, but I'd rather not have to define a separate class for every entity. Here's what I have: Using System.Web.Services.Protocols; namespace Misc { public abstract class BaseDao { public int Single() { return Database.SingleAsync(this); } public int Get(int id) { return Database.GetAsync(this, id); } //other abstract functions } public class MyEntity : BaseDao { //specific functionality } } I'd like to get all the objects returned from the single method, and then compare them to what is
