FIFA 22 will be released for Xbox One and PS4 on 27th September, priced £45 on Xbox One and £55 on PS4. The head of the U.S. Coast Guard was reportedly working with “extremist” conservative figures in a bid to stop a ban on U.S. citizens traveling to Cuba, according to a report. Retired Adm. Paul Zukunft, who worked as the Coast Guard’s deputy commandant and commandant from 2015 to 2017, has revealed to an Iowa newspaper that he made a trip to Cuba in January 2018 with “former cabinet officials and radio talk show hosts,” three of whom are documented to be prominent figures with ties to the Tea Party. Adm. Paul Zukunft waves to passengers on the Coast Guard cutter USRC Waesche as he arrives in Florida on June 8, 2015. (Photo: Carlos Barria/Reuters) Zukunft, who told the Washington Examiner that he supports the enforcement of President Trump’s pullout from the Obama-era deal, also detailed that the purpose of his trip was to “to show solidarity with Cubans who are now being forced into migration,” referring to the fact that some Cubans can travel to the United States without a visa, but are not being processed by border agents. “If there’s an impediment to a trade relationship, you talk to your friends and you try to get it done,” Zukunft, who also worked as the Coast Guard’s commandant, added. Zukunft’s trip to Cuba came on the heels of those of three other high-ranking Coast Guard officials, who flew on a chartered flight to the island nation, according to The Washington Examiner. “We discussed our opposition to a 2017 waiver by former President Obama to the U.S. Cuba embargo, which allowed Cuban-Americans to travel to Cuba without going through strict U.S. visa requirements,” Ronhigh said. “The Cuban hard-liners in his administration were trying to overturn that waiver.” Ronhigh said that the purpose of his trip was to protest the Trump administration's removal of the waiver, which he said was part of the plan to end what he characterized as the Obama administration's "gift"
