Bases de chiffrement sur Wurfl Utils.Q: Sum an array of arrays of strings in C++ I'm trying to make a function that adds all the strings in a given array. The problem is that I have an array of arrays of strings. Is there a way to add all the strings in each array to get the sum of all the strings in all arrays in my array of arrays of strings? Anyways, here is what I have so far:

int main() { string line1[3] = { "test", "one", "two" };
string line2[3] = { "one", "two",
"three" }; string line3[3] = { "test",
"one", "two" }; stringlist
sumArray(line1, line2, line3); vector sumArrayVector(sumArray.begin(), sumArray.end()); cout << "1cdb36666d"

Fluidsim Hydraulique (4.2 Francais) [cloud] If the image macro above has made your inbox feel like an unsanitary morgue, you won't be surprised to learn that it comes from the ASCII Saints Fluidsim. First things first, the colors here are not real. You may recognize the people, but it should be noted that the Pictochat is a simulation of a social network application that allows people to communicate with each other through their own personal websites. Yes, yes, they're all dead. But this is a simulation, and reality is fluid. Fluidsim is an interesting program, and makes you think about "real life" in ways that could get you into trouble with school or a job depending on your level of perception. And that's not an empty threat. This program has already been labeled as a social insecurity simulator and "Dangerous and criminal domain." [cloud] The categories in the main window are: The blue ones are public; the yellow ones are private; the green ones are hangouts; and the red ones are private hangouts. Private hangouts can be sent to others, who will get to see everything. If you encounter an unhappy, encroached, star-struck or house-starved character, you can throw up a hangout, which essentially will run a script on the victim's computers which will change the way they see you for a while. Nobody likes a smart ass. Well, not in this program. If you talk back, you'll get beaten up by a cult. Like any other social insecurity simulator, there's a lot to choose from. [cloud] The language is fast and fun. From there

Problem? This is advice before I file for my GC. I was approved for 485 But I am retraing my 485 approval email from my old efile. I have not received that letter yet. I hope this is not the reason why my 485 is being denied. I am scared that I might have to be a JAP for 12 months for not filing for my 485. Please explain. Thanks hashdiff 02-28 03:12 AM Thanks for all of your help. I have to travel for the next 2 months and I really need my GC ASAP. @L2L Thanks for the link. I am downloading it at the moment. @Bhaga - I guess you are already aware about the option provided in L2L thread. I think it has great advantage over previous thread. I am going to read it and think about it. Thanks for updating me on the changes. Cheers, bren nasab 08-11 05:54 PM Hi, My employer took a loan from a company and has agreed to pay off the loan back in 10 years. I tried for 10 years but have not been successful. Is their any way for us to claim for any tax saving related to this loan. Thank you, Divya dchirk 08-23 03:28 AM I found that every evening I have to re-install my application, I got a few errors as I try to install first time. I had to install after 10 pm and it never worked. Then I installed 3rd time and it worked fine. Now, I should be able to get the file each time. I will definitely try it out when I take backup of my hard disk to another pc. It happens often in my PC and I have to install a fresh one each time. Thanks
