I don't have its own problem. But it works well But it is not my problem for I want to download a file from my server located in London UK. Note: The source server is located in another country. i.e. it could be from France or USA or anywhere What I do want to do is I want to take the file from source server to my local PC I want to make sure that the destination file has the extension which is.rar. I also want to encrypt it. Note: If the application support remote file system then the problem will be solved. What I want is to know: is there any application in Linux which has all the above support? if yes then how it works? if no then is there any alternative solutions in Linux. If there are other solutions then please do mention it. A: There are a few ways to do this but they are all complicated and not simple. In Linux, you can find the relevant commands with the help of Google and Launchpad. If you can find a solution for linux, you could use the programs in Windows via Wine or you could use an SSH client for Linux and use rsync to transfer files over SSH. If you want to have RAR files to be automatically decompressed, you can try using WinRAR 5.31a for Windows as an alternative to 7-Zip. WinRAR includes a compression algorithm specific to RAR files and WinRAR also supports many different compression methods. If you are on a Windows machine, then you can use WinRAR to decompress RAR files. Alternatively, you can also download 7-Zip for Windows A more simple way to do what you want, is to simply copy the files off from the remote server onto your computer. You can just simply connect to the server via SSH and then perform some commands to get what you want. You will require the following commands ssh server cd /to/path/on/remote/server ls You should be able to do this assuming that you know where the file is on the remote server. Alternatively, you can simply try: ssh username@remote.host cd /to/path/on/remote/server ls 1.
