Screening endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography on those with choledocholithiasis: an audit. Choledocholithiasis is a common disorder. It has been suggested that a positive history of choledocholithiasis on history taking is not an acceptable reason to perform endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography (ERCP) on patients with moderate and severe acute pancreatitis (MSAIP) without cholangiographic evidence of biliary disease. This audit aimed to assess the incidence of hidden choledocholithiasis on plain abdominal radiograph in patients with choledocholithiasis, who were referred for elective ERCP. All patients who had choledocholithiasis were prospectively recruited into the audit. A plain abdominal radiograph was performed in all patients. Of the
