Hi, is there any way to save a sequence from my current project under another name? I'm trying to export a ccd sequence and load it in another sequence. I'm using the dgx version, not the timeline, and I need to keep this sequence the same for both projects. I'm trying to have the same sequence export to all of my projects. A: The export option which is on the Sequence menu is based on the active project, not the exported project. As you are exporting to a different project, you need to export with the new project as the active scene, not the project you are currently editing in. For example, if you use project A as the active project when you export to project B, you will need to switch project A to project B before exporting. This will not be as easy as you may hope for but it is the only way. You will need to use two "exported" sequences to share the same sequence. A: 3 steps for users who are not using software skin to export in relalyout: 1- when you press on the export button, for any sequences (it doesn't matter the project is the timeline, active scene, etc) select the sequence you want to export move it in the layers panel (those layer have a yellow square on them) 2- now this sequence is in the layers panel select the sequence in the layers panel press on New (in the tools panel) and select "save sequence as" 3- select the right folder to save the sequence in You can see that it doesn't matter the project, you will end up saving the sequence in the following folders: - /Scenes/ project name/scene name/sequence name You can see the sequence in the new project and you can see that it appears in the "add - > new" in the timeline. .substr(i + 1, 5)); if (buf.trim() === "entrance" || buf.trim() === "exit") { currentExit = i; } } if (currentExit) { // These values can
