A mathematical model is developed to predict the colonization ability of lactic acid bacteria. The colonization ability of lactic acid bacteria in milk is closely related to the duration of time during which the bacteria are viable. The optimal conditions for either Lactobacillus gasseri or Lactococcus lactis ssp. cremoris in the human oral cavity are different. Mathematical methods can be used to predict the colonization ability of lactic acid bacteria. The model provides a reference for the selection of probiotic lactobacilli in the dairy industry. In one of my services, I am creating log files: -rw-rw-r-- 1 www-data www-data 74078 Jun 21 21:00 log.3 The file is being created using a.sh script: /usr/bin/newlog -p $(pwd) $(date +%Y-%m-%d-%H%M) $(uname -n) $(hostname) $(logname) "$(whoami)" -t "$(pwd)/$(date +%Y-%m-%d-%H%M).txt" /usr/bin/newlog is a script I am providing the web server with. It creates a new log file and then appends the time stamp to it. I am running it as www-data user in order to create the files in a www-data directory. I would like to be able to create a temporary directory in order to give the script permissions to write to it. If the file exists, it should append the time stamp to it. Is there a way to do this? I tried the following command but it did not work: mkdir -p /var/log/temp-file A: mkdir -m 777 /var/log/temp-file This will create a directory with write permissions for group, other and owner. A: mkdir -p ~/tmp is probably what you 1cdb36666d
