What's new:

Since the world wide web (literally and figuratively) began it's fair share of gluttony and gossip I find myself without a game that can be played with others without a travel companion. What i lack is a game that allows people to play far flung from each other without losing a human connection. So here is my take on Go Fish. Go Fish is a game played by two people. In this game each person in turn comments on a number of numbers in their targetted bucket. When they have exhausted their numbers they walk away and the next person in turn picks a number and keeps playing until they have picked no more numbers or have exhausted their turns. When you have one person who has exhausted his turn he/she should say out loud if he has any more numbers to play. This usually is the difficult part as people in a group do not have a good reason to say anything but, if some lone soul knows he is finished it is ok to say so and it makes the other person playing feel more comfortable. If your friends are in there and you want to play you can also say out loud who you have left, this avoids the lonely feeling of being finished. At the end of the game all players should say the final number they have picked and this is done by asking the player "has anyone gotten a number yet?" If no numbers remain you say out loud that you are finished and that person who didn't get a number yet should state again "What?" and you should say "that's my number" and then everyone knows who has had the last numbers. Then you say out loud, "Do you want to play one more?" and the person who didn't get a number yet says "No", and that's the end of your run. My first experience with Go Fish was because of the internet. I met a stranger with a Go Fish strategy. Essentially he would pick a number and a person would say then number then he would pick again and that person would say the number and he would pick again, and so on. It made a lot of sense to me that if you had a series of numbers you could pick a series of numbers and play until you did. Then we encountered something new. It was a game played in a very different way. First person I picked a number: 16, second person pick a number: 21 I say it out loud "16" Second player picks a number and says "21" Now I say out loud: "
