What's New In?

Fetal intravascular transfusion as a non-invasive treatment for fetal anemia. Sixty-seven fetuses with severe anemia were treated by fetal intravascular transfusion. The needle system used for transfusion was a catheter of 3-4 mm in outer diameter and 150-250 microns in inner diameter. Intravenous (IV) and intramuscular (IM) injections of the anemic newborn were compared with IV transfusion of the anemic fetus and injection of recombinant erythropoietin (rHuEpo). The flow of a volume of 25-30 ml/kg, performed mainly by IM injection, was adequate for correction of acute anemia. Fetal blood loss due to puncture was mainly prevented by use of an IM injection with a small volume. Fetal blood loss due to the transfusion needle was found to be less than 5%. Frequency of fetal losses during the administration of rHuEpo was low. IV infusion of anemic newborn via the umbilical vein without anticoagulation resulted in high blood loss and inborn mortality. Transfusion of anemic fetuses via the umbilical vein with anticoagulant injections of heparin or tris-acryl gelatin (TAG) prevented fetal losses.

Intravascular transfusion of anemic fetuses via the umbilical vein with TAG was performed after hemolysis of the newborn red cells had been prevented by an intravenous injection of an anti-RhD antibody. No mortality was noted. Results indicate that fetal intravascular transfusion is a non-invasive treatment of severe fetal anemia with low fetal mortality and acceptable neonatal morbidity.

Q: Why QScrollBar has no way to block resize? The only way to change the size of my QScrollBar is by changing the width or height. I know it's a bug because there was a commit 30 years ago and it's not fixed but this makes the application messy. How to block resize or resize to minimum/maximum without changing the width/height? Thanks P.S. It's Qt4, if I recall correctly

A: Did you know the thing that the QScrollBar is is a QWidget so you can block resize in it.
