I have seen, always in darkness. I have seen them emerging, walking gracefully from the ocean depths. I have seen them take to the skies, like giant birds. I have seen them chase one another, like children chasing cars. I have seen them in the kitchen, in the corridors, in their evening clothes, and sometimes, when the moon was full, I have seen them, moving purposefully along the river banks, carrying certain wispy objects with them. I have seen them moving towards me, leaping from the surface, diving headlong into the depths. I have seen them with their folded wings, entangled in the fields and meadows, and with their claws knotted in the roots of bramble bushes. I have seen them flying without wings, with their mouths open and fastened on trees. I have seen them roaming in the forests, hopping from tree to tree. I have seen them in the streets, hiding in sewer holes, and on the footpaths. I have seen them, clambering up walls, and I have seen them climbing into windows, and into houses, in order to spy on the living. I have seen them perched on the many chimneys of the houses, and I have seen them sticking out from the sides of the numerous barrels of gunpowder they had stolen from gunpowder factories. I have seen them hiding at the bottom of very deep wells, and I have seen them, like giants, scaling the rocky summits of the hills. I have seen them looking at me, with their black, ever-watchful eyes. But I have not seen them trying to kill me. I have not seen them sinking into me. And I have not seen them trying to make me like them. Other than all that, I am here. I have learned much about you. I can tell you the history of the world. I can tell you about the crimes committed by the government; I can tell you about the crimes perpetrated by the world of imaginary creatures known as elves. But I will not tell you that you and I are similar. I will not tell you that we are apart. The secret is mine, and mine alone. Sleep in peace. You are a dwarf. > There was something different about that dwarf's eyes. Something that he could not identify, but which shamed him. He remembered the other time it had happened to him, just a few years ago. That time, he had seen the
