Artist: Awolnation â€“ Last Night On Earth.Q: How to tell when one call to biquadFilter has finished before calling the next? I'm working with BiquadFilters and I'm having trouble cancelling a new call to biquadFilter (specifically biquadFilter, with a biquadCoefficient of 1.0f). So to preface this, I'm using the lib_x domain to create a unique call each time. I created a solution, which is actually shown in the code below, and now to demonstrate this, what I want to do is call new call to biquadFilter, while calling the next() until the last call to biquadFilter has finished, then call clear() so I can create a new call to biquadFilter. I'm struggling to understand the correct way to do this. In the sample code below, I've created another call called getLastBiquad, which is supposed to get the state of the last biquadfilter call. What it looks like is that the new call to biquadFilter is clearing the old call. So, I tried creating a boolean variable called finishFlag, which is supposed to be true when the last call to biquadFilter is cleared. void createCall(){ dest = new DFSignalSignalPort(); dest.setFilterEnabled(true); cbFilter = new BiquadFilter(//BLUE LINE new double[] {1.0f}, //HLL coeficient new double[] {1.0f}, //LLR coeficient new double[] {1.0f}); //IQLR coeficient // get
