Gaming machines which provide players awards in primary or base games are well known. Gaming machines generally require the player to place or make a wager to activate the primary or base game. In many of these gaming machines, the award is based on the player obtaining a winning symbol or symbol combination and on the amount of the wager (e.g., the higher the wager, the higher the award). Generally, symbols or symbol combinations which are less likely to occur usually provide higher awards. In such known gaming machines, the amount of the wager made on the base game by the player may vary. Gaming machines which provide secondary or bonus games are also known. The secondary or bonus games usually provide an additional award, such as a bonus award, to the player. Secondary or bonus games usually do not require an additional wager by the player to be activated. Instead, secondary or bonus games are generally activated or triggered upon an occurrence of a designated triggering symbol or triggering symbol

Economists, McKittrick says, have considered this option for about 20 years. But unlike other possible carbon-trading schemes — like carbon dioxide ceilings, and emissions permits sold by some electricity companies — the carbon tax is "not seen as being politically feasible" in most countries, he says. That's because the billions of dollars in revenue raised by a carbon tax would be spent elsewhere, economists say. "So many other things are at risk — from our transportation systems to public health, from culture to a whole host of things," McKittrick says. "It would be a good idea, but it's not going to happen." Modest carbon tax? An international carbon-trading market could even hurt the environment, McKittrick says, because it might bring the price of other desirable goods down — like cars, for example. c9d1549cdd published:05 May 2017 views:304548 Bonanza Airlines Flight 22: Bonanza Air Lines Flight 22, Boeing 727-129, operated by Bonanza Airlines, departed from San Francisco on May 27, 1978, bound for Denver, Colorado. The twin-engine jet developed a malfunction in one of its Pratt & Whitney JT8D engines after takeoff. The pilot, who was also the head of Braniff International Airways, attempted to return to the San Francisco International Airport, but the engine failure and heavy fuel consumption forced the aircraft to make an emergency landing in a San Francisco marsh, between Treasure Island and the Presidio. All 132 people on board survived with minor injuries. The FAA's subsequent investigation found numerous design flaws and poor workmanship in the manufacturing of the engine, leading to a ban on all direct injection engines on 727 and 757 aircraft, the engines that were used on the accident aircraft. This investigation established new standards for how the airline industry would be regulated in the future.
