My ultimate goal is to have one of the machines in my home network be my remote desktop server. It's a Windows 7 home premium x64 machine. At this time, I have another Windows 7 home premium x64 machine that is connected to the internet, to my router, and to my home network. I've never had to set up a remote

If I go into my home network and connect to the server, I can't see anything. I'm not sure what to do, and all the instructions I've seen online for setting up remote desktop servers are referring to someone else trying to set up their own. So, how do I get the server to show up as the default remote desktop program, and how do I get it to show up in the options when I go to "Open in remote desktop"? A: Right click on the icon on your desktop, select properties, then "Open with" If you want to change the default program for opening "application-like" files, right click on an.exe file in your file
