Today, many students are familiar with his work, but only a few know much about the person. This is one of the major problems of literary biographies and can lead to the making of bad judgments about the "real" Sartre. It is worth pointing out that one of the best biographies of Sartre in French is Jean Grenier's Marc Sartre, l'athée et l'homme de lettres (1999). Sartre was born and raised in the semi-rural town of La Roche-Guyon, in the Loire region, where his father, André-Marie, was a silk merchant and a board member of the Chamber of Commerce. He attended a local school and the Lycée Henri IV in Paris. Sartre studied to be a barrister, but dropped out after a year and a half of studies to help his father with his silk business. He had a rich and varied intellectual life. He wrote his first novel, Nausea, in the spring of 1929 while in Paris. Nausea was published in 1930. Two years later, Sartre decided to devote his life to literature, and he became friends with Albert Camus and other figures from the New Wave. The Roaring Twenties In Paris, Sartre wrote his first plays, Le Chat (1930), Les Jours de l'été (1931), and Le Balcon (1931). The first two won the French Academy's award for the best play of the year, and the third was published by Editions Gallimard in 1932 and adapted for the stage by Maurice Scève in 1933. These three plays, plus Sartre's first published essay, Le Communisme et la création (1932), represent Sartre's earliest work in philosophy. In the essay, he traces the causes of communism back to its

me to play through a website completely though and set the client up with their end options under different scenarios. All of this can be saved to replay as needed to simulate future situations on a whim. As you can see, since I'm building a real strategy, my build orders are going to be mostly attack and defense. My next goal is to model the army composition I need to build to ensure that it's the right composition to defend my base. I'm thinking that in StarCraft, you pick your star player and then build different units around him/her to further support the star player, so I do the same in this. First, I'll run a defender and attack with a medivac. Medivacs, in case you haven't figured out, are the type of unit that fly to the closest group of units, replace them, and return to the point the group was at to attack once empty. In this case, I'll spawn the medivac right in the middle of the base under a complete shade as my first defensive unit. As I'm playing, I'll build the army around this unit to ensure that it's got enough strength to mount a defense, and then I can make plays to disrupt the enemy economy. You can read more about swarm hosts in this guide here. The second build I'm going to run is an immortal player, similar to a marine player. Unlike a marine player, I don't think this is my main player. He's an hard carry by nature so I think he'll be my second "main" player from now on. This will be an easier unit to pull off since I just have to pick a high ground out of my eight total bases, and that's exactly what I'll do. I'll send my immortal in as my first unit in the mix, he'll be his personal rammer. Just watch out for shrouds, they're the ally to them. The third build I want to play is another stem player, this one I'm actually going to run as my main player for a while. I don't think I've met anything impossible with this guy as of yet,
