glebookmoviehindidubbeddownload. The complex network of diagnostic pathways and cultural artifacts describing the health of a nation-state is called a "social construction." One of the major challenges of today's rapidly changing health systems is: how do we make a diagnosis in a dynamic, data-driven, and constantly evolving health care system? It's a challenge because the diagnosis is, as usual, a social construction. Every health system defines its mission, its stakeholders, its services, and its values differently, and this is reflected in different sets of diagnoses, prognoses, and treatments. As a result, traditional disease classifications and diagnostic pathways are rapidly becoming outdated. As I have been involved with the Bayesian statistics and big data on learning from biomedical evidence for over three decades, I think my perspective on the challenges of diagnosis is unique. A few examples from my experience will illustrate the three
