EFilms Workstation 5 - How to Swap Places Without Moving.ZIPAs exemplified in my U.S. Pat. No. 6,826,796, the disclosure of which is hereby incorporated by reference, there are many occasions when it is desirable to connect a ground to a vehicle chassis frame, such as the vehicle frame of a pick up truck. These occasions include, but are not limited to, service of electrical equipment and power tools, maintenance of the electrical systems, and maintenance of the climate control and air conditioning systems of the truck. These various occasions for connecting the ground of the truck chassis to the ground of the ground service system include a necessity for the connection of the ground service connection points in order to have a tight ground connection to the vehicle. U.S. Pat. No. 6,826,796 describes a trailer hitch connector assembly. The trailer hitch connector assembly includes a first and a second connector. The first connector is attached to the trailer hitch support tube while the second connector is attached to the vehicle frame. The first and the second connectors are electrically connected to each other. The trailer hitch connector assembly is configured such that the first and the second connectors can be disconnected from the ground of the vehicle frame without having to disconnect any of the ground service connection points. This invention provides a trailer hitch connector that is simpler and more reliable than the assembly of U.

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a cache system and more particularly to a cache controller having a cache module and a shared memory module and to a method of operating same. 2. Description of the Related Art The Assignee of the present application has developed a technology for the data transfer operation between a central processing unit (CPU) and a memory under the name "SRAM cache". In this technology, a cache module is provided between a CPU and a memory, and SRAM cells are arranged as a cache memory in the cache module. This technology is disclosed in, for example, Japanese Patent Laid-open No. Hei 11-247323. In the system described above, the SRAM cache technology is used for the data transfer operation from the CPU to the memory, and the data is transferred from the cache module to the memory via an internal SRAM bus line. When a burst write mode is in use, an SRAM write buffer is provided which stores the write data from the cache module to the memory and provides the stored data to the bus line. In this mode, the data is successively written in bursts in the order in which it is input to the buffer. The data read operation from the memory to the cache module is carried out via the SRAM cache module. The data is transmitted from the memory to the cache module in the first place to be stored in the buffer, and it is then transmitted to the bus line in the last place. The data is transferred from the bus line to the cache module in the last place and then it is written to the memory. However, in the technology described above, when the write operation is carried out from the cache module to the memory, the write data is first stored in the SRAM write buffer, and the data is then stored in the bus line. For this reason, the write operation to the memory cannot be carried out in parallel with the
