Radiotherapy is a major component of any multidisciplinary therapeutic approach of the treatment of carcinomas of the nasal and paranasal sinuses. This paper is meant to give an overview of the present day indications of radiotherapy at the Dept. of Radiation Oncology at Deutsches Konservative Krebsgesellschaft (DKG). About 70 % of the patients with carcinomas of the nasal and paranasal sinuses in stages I and II are curable with surgery. The remaining 30 % will be cured by a combined therapy with surgery and radiotherapy. The best results are obtained in T4N3M0 patients and in cases with residual or recurrent tumor after surgery. The combination of surgery and radiotherapy is superior to radiotherapy alone. For these reasons the combined therapy of surgery and radiotherapy is recommended for the treatment of nasal and paranasal sinus carcinomas. The possibilities of combined therapy are often limited by poor response of the patient and/or difficulties of the surgeon. 6d1f23a050
