bjbandar namal.Q:
Why does my element
not align with the top of its parent element? I have the following
HTML: First Second

Third Some content In the .first-container I want the nav to be aligned at the top of it (so it actually scrolls with the page. Also I need the .first-container and the .nav to have a total width of 1240px. I have the following CSS: .first-container { width: 1240px; height: 620px; background-color:

green; position:
relative; margin: 0; }
.nav { height: auto;
background-color:
blue; position:
absolute; top: 0; width: 600px; } .nav ul { list-
style: none; margin: 0;
padding: 0;
