FILE - Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky, center, and Defense Minister Stepan Poltorak, left, thank the crowd of people gathered on the square as they lay flowers in front of the country's parliament building in Kiev, Ukraine, Saturday, July 7, 2019. Within two hours of Zelensky's speech on Saturday, the Ukrainian parliament gave a go-ahead to martial law in Ukraine's west. The emergency rules, which allow the government to impose curfews and limit freedom of movement, began Monday, July 8. (AP Photo/Sergei Grits, File) FILE - This photo taken on Monday, July 1, 2019, shows the view from the window of a mobile internet cafe in the northeastern Ukrainian city of Luhansk. The self-declared local authorities in eastern Ukraine, which until last weekend were effectively run by Russia's military, told the United Nations Monday that they have regained full control of the region. (AP Photo/Vadim Ghirda, File) FILE - Valentina Yazurikova wipes her eyes after visiting the burial site of her father, Valeriy Yazurik, a Ukrainian soldier, who was killed during a battle against Russia-backed separatists in Luhansk, eastern Ukraine, Friday, Sept. 12, 2019. Valeriy Yazurik was 20 when he joined the army to protect his family. He was killed by a shell as he and his men were patrolling in Luhansk province. of them idealistic young university graduates, welcome the Ukrainian presidential envoy at the office of the Gagarin military airport of Luhansk in eastern Ukraine, Feb. 28, 2022. Volunteerism has seized the city. Until the missiles struck within walking distance of the cathedrals and cafes downtown on Friday, March 18, Ukraine's cultural capital was a city that could feel distant from the war.
