
Windows 10 PE Modified V3.0 X64 Bob Ombs Pre Activated !!TOP!!

The reason they went with "BobOmb's Modified Win10PE" is because earlier versions used an ISO with 3 partitions, the first two partitions were only used for the boot loader, and the third partition was only used for the main files, if the boot loader is missing or the partition is defective, you'd have to enter Command Prompt at a boot prompt and run a command like this(ignore the one-time password, its to keep you from accidentally entering the root password): @mkdir C:\windows\recovery\ (then reboot) One of the files is the boot loader(boot.wim). This version of the WinPE boots only from a DVD, not a USB. I add this because the laptop I wanted to use only has a DVD drive, so the USB would not work. Is there a bootable CD that you can make yourself? You could try and make a bootable CD using Windows PE on my PC, or Windows PE on this PC, here's what you would do: Copy the "cdimage.wim" that you have extracted from the current PE to a CD (do not extract it to the C: drive and then copy it to a CD) Use the "Create PE For USB" tool to create a USB Boot image (on my PC, this tool is in the "WinPE" folder) Copy the "cdimage.wim" that you have extracted from the current PE to the USB (do not extract it to the C: drive and then copy it to the USB) Install the contents of the USB using the "Install Windows PE" tool on the PC that has the original PE version of Windows 10 (you need to install this PE or the original PE will not boot!) Boot from the USB using the instructions on the "Install Windows PE" tool, you will be prompted to either start Windows or start a specific version of Windows. If you select "Start Windows", it will boot into Windows, if you select "Start this version of Windows", it will boot to Windows PE, the version of Windows that you will copy to your USB Flash Drive. (You can tell which version of Windows PE you are booting by its version number)
