To study the role of leukotriene antagonists in prophylaxis of bronchial asthma attacks using the reisolated X-factor phenomenon. The study covered 40 asthmatic patients aged 19-50 years (mean age of 34.2 +/- 0.66 years) with a history of asthma exacerbations (at least 2 such episodes in 2 years). The study was based on assessing the results of asthmatic attacks to both asthma treatment and a multifactorial approach with the use of leukotriene antagonists, prior to and after 2 years of taking preventive medication in the form of leukotriene antagonists. The leukotriene antagonists used were pranlukast (Pharmacia, Netherlands, Germany), and zafirlukast (Pharmacia, Germany). The study showed that asthmatic attacks to therapy with leukotriene antagonists are as effective as antiasthmatic drugs, that were used in the past. f988f36e3a
