Multilocus analysis shows extensive divergence between the moderately thermophilic strains of the single-cell crenarchaeal genus Pyrococcus. Pyrococcus is a very abundant genus of hyperthermophilic archaea that includes mainly single-cell organisms. The phylogenetic affinities of members of this genus were examined at 16S rRNA and three thermophilic protein gene loci, coding for subunits of SSU (rRNA), SSB, and EF-Tu. The results showed that Pyrococcus species are not monophyletic. Four species are nested within a larger clade that includes the three other hyperthermophilic genera: Thermococcus, Thermoproteus

Jacob de.Q: Supervised Learning (Python) - categorical value for input data I have a dataset consisting of one feature (X) with categorical values from 0,1,2,3...N where N is the number of categories. If the feature is not categorical then X would simply be continuous (floating point values). What would be an appropriate label, y, for the output? In practice N is 10 and the feature is continuous. This is clearly a simple binary classification problem with different losses for X>0 and X 0) If you also want to map to some ordered space like [0, 1,..., 10], you could again assume that the 79a2804d6b
